

RESIDENCY/MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREE IN COMPARATIVE OPHTHALMOLOGY AT THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

The Ohio State University, Department of Veterinary Clinical Sciences is accepting applications from qualified individuals for a combined three-year clinical residency, with a Master's Degree. This program will begin July 15, 2017 and has a primary objective of preparing the resident for the successful completion of the American College of Veterinary Ophthalmologists board certification process. A second objective is to expose the candidate to all aspects of academic veterinary medicine, including teaching, research and service work. The resident will fulfill the residency requirements of the ACVO and the Department of Veterinary Clinical Science. The goals are to develop critical scientific thinking, research methods, and a broad clinical knowledge base in successful residents. Please refer to <http://vet.osu.edu/education/residency-programs> and <http://vet.osu.edu/education/ophthalmology> for a more detailed description of the program. If accepted for a residency position, agreement to a non-compete clause may be required.
